

A Tribute to Douglas E. Light

It is most appropriate that Canadian Woman Studies pays tribute to Doug Light in this anthology edition. He, as President of Centennial College, provided the start-up money for this journal in 1978.

Although A Decade of CWS/cf was put together during the lowest point in our funding history, it is nevertheless a celebration of 12 successful years of feminist publishing. Doug Light's commitment to the journal has been firm throughout these years: his response, as President of George Brown College, to our recent funding crisis was swift and generous.

This Spring, Doug Light retired from his position at George Brown College. His has been a lifetime commitment to education, beginning at Queen's University (1959-1963), through Ryerson Polytechnical Institute (1963-67), Humber College (1967-1971), Centennial College (1971-1978) and finally, George Brown College (1978-1991), where he served a 13-year term as President.

We would like to extend our best wishes to him for an enjoyable retirement, and although we've requested (and he's agreed) to remain on our advisory board, we hope he has much productive and happy personal time away from the administrative responsibilities he has so capably managed over the years. For his support and guidance, the Editorial Board and staff of CWS/cf would simply like to say, thanks Doug.
