developing skills in the areas of capacities to foster and value relationships and to care for others.

The gender role socialization processes that lead to distorted visions of masculinity and femininity are firmly grounded in the traditional patriarchal family form. Fortunately, there are a variety of alternatives to the patriarchal family form that are being lived out today, e.g., single-parent families which usually means woman-headed, gay and lesbian couples some of whom are raising children, communal living arrangements and so on. We must give credence and encouragement to alternative family forms, as well as working toward transformation of the traditional one.

The Grass Is Like Me

The grass is like me.

It learns to love life

Only after feet have crushed it.

By becoming wet

Does it mean to show

 modesty’s warmth, or

Passion’s heat?

The grass is like me.

As it lifts its head

The mower

Promising to turn it to velvet

Levels its lifting top.

You really labour

To put women down.

But the desire to grow

Dies neither in the earth

Nor in the woman.

Hear me.

The old idea to make a track was good.

Those who shy from the heat of courage

Will still be trampled

To make tracks for authority.

But they are straw,

Not grass.

The grass is like me.

CALL FOR SUBMISSIONS

STILL FEMINIST, STILL FIGHTING
Women Organizing for Change

Women’s Press is celebrating its 20th anniversary by issuing a collection honouring women’s organizing. Women’s everyday life, struggles, demands and strategies are a product of their varied life experiences. This anthology seeks to reflect these experiences by highlighting the strength and diversity of women’s collective action in the community, workplace, home, the educational arena, and in relations with the state.

We welcome submissions by all women in the following areas:

- racism, classism and women’s politicization
- women, work and poverty
- state policies and women’s action
- women and health
- sexuality
- Canadian regionalism and feminist consciousness
- violence against women
- women in academia
- liberal/bourgeois feminism
- women and national solidarity struggles
