Lesotho women planting corn

Credit: Zimbabwe Women's Bureau

models that will ultimately raise women's participation, empower them and raise their status. Models that will feed us. The suggested model is a return to our traditional system with the introduction of appropriate village technologies in the traditional sector.

Khidir.

Models that will ultimately raise women's participation, empower them and raise their status. Models that will feed us. The suggested model is a return to our traditional system with the introduction of appropriate village technologies in the traditional sector.

'Balghis Badri, a member of the Babiker Bedri Scientific Association for Women's Studies, is a lecturer in sociology at the University of Khartoum. She presented this paper at the Women, Law and Development Workshop at Forum '85.