REBEKKAH ALEXANDER

Child

in the night you make noises like a small cat while you sleep
 I wait to run to you from exhaustion, overprotection lying still, the fear that you alone in there may be dragged off by the bigger animals devoured before I can bear my teeth throw my body over you love enough yet grapple with the nagging reality of my lost self how I wish you never existed that I may continue in my womanhood still you breathe irregular tremor from some infantile dream and I am left to drown in this vulnerability

Rebekkah Alexander is a therapist and writer living in Miller Lake, Ontario.
