were left in Julio’s car on a place that had come to be a public yet clandestine cemetery for the kidnapped and tortured (ODHAG).

References

Lugones, Marfa. 2007. Heterosexualism and the Colonial/Modern Gender System. Hypatia 22 (1).

ANGELA BELCASTRO

This Side of the Gate

Black iron bars tower.
I stand this side of the gate unreach, safely fed.
My life nourished, solitary.

Beyond ferric bars, language is unreadable:
The world, its movements trickle through narrow spaces.
Gestures, noise, hands collide against me – I step back.

Silent before the latch
I lift my pen high.
Begin to write.

Angela Belcastro is a graduate of McMaster University’s Honours English, and York University’s Bachelor of Education Program. She has taught ESL in the interior region of Guyana and presently teaches in elementary school. She is working on her sixth collection of poetry.