LYN LIFSHIN
Survivors at the Kovno Exhibit

Washington Post, Jan. 28, 1997

“My mother carried me to the fields in a potato sack, gave me to Christians For weeks I’d been drilled in Lithuanian and coached remember you are not a Jew.

Not a word of Yiddish. Never.”

“A dog bit my arm,” another woman said, “and I let go of my little brother. I remember the look in his eyes as they took him away and left me. There is not even a picture of him. When I die, there will be no evidence he ever existed.” “I forgot my own name,” a man says, “they never used me name. They always called me you damned Jew.”
