

the interpretation of Chinese culture, a practice that amounts to cultural and religious imperialism.

This paper was presented at the Centre for Feminist Research's "Conference on Female Spirituality: A Celebration of Worshippers, Goddesses, Priestesses, and Female Saints," held at York University in March 1996. Funding assistance from the Social Sciences and Humanities Research Council (SSHRC) for the presentation and publication of this paper is gratefully acknowledged.

Jordan Paper is a professor in the East Asian, Religious Studies, and Woman's Studies Programmes of York University, and is a former President of the North American Association for the Study of Religion. His books include The Fu Tzu: A Post-han Confucian Text (1987); Offering Smoke: The Sacred Pipe and Native American Religion (1988, reprinted 1994); and The Spirits Are Drunk: Comparative Approaches to Chinese Religion (1995). He is presently working on a manuscript entitled Through the Earth Darkly: Comparative Approaches to Female Spirituality.

JULIE ANDRES

Alive

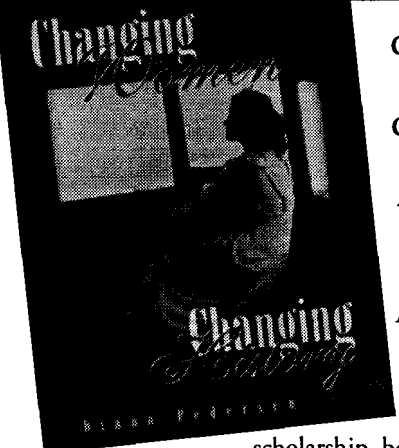

When the earthly urges stream
Through cracks in my cathedral
I ask that my desire not be fulfilled too soon.

Julie Andres earned her BA in depth psychology last year from Antioch University, Seattle. She writes fiction and poetry and works from her home on Bowen Island, BC.
